Guidelines to use if you're thinking about filing a protest:

The cause of protest must be a material violation of one of the laws of the game (game too short, too many players on the field, etc.) and not a subjective violation (didn't approve of the referee's foul selection, offside calls, in/out of bounds, etc.), and the violation acted in a manner that affected the outcome of the game.

As an example, if a team lost 11-2 and the ref stopped the game 3 minutes short, that would not have affected the outcome of the game.

These are the main criteria judged when evaluating a game protest.
